In Its Eighteenth Year Israel Awaits Arrival Of German Envoy To Live There Before Long Within Full Diplomatic Relations

The German Federal Government in a statement issued declares that the establishment of diplomatic relations with Israel is an "important step towards the normalization of the situation in the Middle East". It was not directed against anyone. It hurt no one, says the London, England, Times. The German people were bound by ties of friendship with the Arab states.

The text of letters exchanged between Dr. Erhard, the Chancellor, and Mr. Eshkol, the Israel Prime Minister, was published simultaneously in Bonn and in Tel Aviv. The Chancellor wrote:—

"The attitude of the Federal Republic of Germany in the past proves that it is aware of the peculiar position of Germans in relation to Jews all over the world. It fills me with gratification that our two countries have been able to reach agreement."

Mr. Eshkol said: —

"I am conscious of the fact, Mr. Chancellor, that it is thanks to your personal initiative and determination that a satisfactory solution has been found at this significant juncture in the relations between our two countries."

The Chancellor's letter mentioned three specific points on which agreement was also reached in the recent negotiations:

Outstanding Military Aid. — This has been converted into a once-only economic settlement. The Federal Government has made available to Israel DM.64m. (about £5,760,000) which she is free to use as she pleases. Mr. Eshkol stated that the conversion must not affect adversely the Israel military potential.

Economic Aid. — The Federal Government will enter into negotiations with Israel in two to three months on future economic aid. This is to fill the gap created by the expiry of the 1952 reparations agreement, under which Bonn has paid out a total of DM.3,450,000 in yearly instalments.

Scientists in Egypt. — The Federal Government is taking steps to apply existing legislation subjecting the recruiting of German labour by foreign countries to the authorization of the labour office in Nuremberg to the case of agents attempting to entice German scientists into going to Egypt.

Herr von Hase, the State Secretary in the Press and Information Office, said that West Germany did not intend to turn embassies in countries which broke off diplomatic relations into consulates, says the London Times. So far Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Kuwait, Jordan, Algeria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Yemen have broken off relations. France was to be the protecting power. Economic and cultural relations would continue, but the Federal Government intends to slow down its capital and technical aid in such a manner as to persuade the countries concerned to reestablish normal relations.

In an act filled with historic import and political portent, Israel and West Germany announced the establishment of formal diplomatic relations.

The move, coming twenty years after the collapse of the Nazi regime which killed six million Jews, says the New York Herald Tribune, means that for the first time in seventeen years Germany will have an official representative on Jewish soil where many survivors of Hitler's holocaust make their home.

The Arab world, which still considers itself at war with Israel since it failed to crush the Jewish state in fighting in 1948, reacted angrily.

Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Yemen, Jordan and Saudi Arabia broke relations with Bonn; and Algeria and Sudan, were followed by oil-rich Kuwait which called off its efforts to establish relations with West Germany. And Egypt and Yemen were reported considering recognition of Communist East Germany.

Of the thirteen Arab states, only Tunisia — whose President Habib Bourguiba has proposed peaceful coexistence with Israel — Morocco, and Libya have indicated they will continue relations with West Germany.

Actually, official relations between Israel and West Germany were already established when Chancellor Erhard and Prime Minister Levi Eshkol exchanged letters expressing hopes for a happy relationship between the two countries, reports the New York Herald Tribune. West German spokesman Karl Guenther von Hase told a news conference.

The official announcement, accompanied by a personal letter from Dr. Erhard, also was conveyed via West German ambassadors to the Arab nations. The letters explained Bonn's viewpoint and said: "The German hand remains outstretched in the Arab realm."

West Germany has paid Israel nearly all of $862 million which it agreed to pay in restitution and reparation; has furnished arms to Israel; has extended the statute of limitations on Nazi war criminals; and says it has been trying to persuade German scientists working for Egypt to return home. Dr. Erhard referred to two of those points in his letter.

It was Dr. Erhard's cancellation of the arms agreement last February that paved the way for the establishment of relations between the two countries.

West Germany had hoped that cancellation of the agreement would lead Egyptian President Nasser to call off an invitation to Communist East Germany's Chief of State Walter Ulbricht. When Mr. Nasser gave Mr. Ulbricht a full-blown welcome, Dr. Erhard moved to create the ties with Israel.

Dr. Erhard also told Mr. Eshkol that many of the West German scientists outside NATO countries already have returned; that his government "has reason to assume" many others will do so soon; and that his government is moving speedily, says the New York Herald Tribune, to prevent the illegal enticing of German military sphere in foreign countries.

The Cologne police announced that the Cologne synagogue and the headquarters of the Israeli purchasing mission, turned into an embassy, were put under police protection, says the New York Times. The police said the measure was taken in anticipation of demonstrations by Arab students against the establishment of diplomatic relations.

The notes accompanying the announcement of the establishment of Israeli-West German relations aroused interest in Israel for what each said and did not say. The Israeli note recalled the historical background of German-Israeli relations and the "stormy present" situation.

Premier Eshkol also pointed out, unlike his West German counterpart, that the initiative for establishing relations had come from Bonn. This point was made for moral and internal political reasons since Israel had always insisted that the Germans make the initial gesture.

The Israeli note, unlike the German one, did not go into the arms question. The Israeli Government has insisted that it would accept no compensation in lieu of aid that remained undelivered.

Israeli sources would not amplify Chancellor Erhard's remarks other than to say that "politically we have emerged strengthened, and as for our security, we have certainly not been hurt or discriminated against."

Other quarters indicated that third-party arrangements would assure that Israel would be no worse off militarily than if the arms agreement had not been suspended and further West German arms deliveries to "areas of tension" had not been cut off. The United States is understood to figure prominently in the new arrangements.

On the question of economic aid, Israeli sources noted that this aid "could be expected to be generous" in view of the special relationship between the two peoples. Expanded aid was a main subject of the protracted negotiations.

The importance attached to the question of German scientists in the United Arab Republic was reflected in Mr. Eshkol's observation that Israel expected that the "attitude and intentions" shown by Dr. Erhard would "speedily dispose of this affair."

Premier Eshkol but not Chancellor Erhard mentioned the question of the West German statute of limitations on Nazi crimes. Sources told W. Granger Blair, of the New York Times, that Mr. Eshkol's observations were intended to show that Israel was not satisfied with the recent German decision to extend the statute by four and a half years.

In several weeks Israel is expected to name her ambassador to Bonn, from these candidates, most frequently mentioned: Ehud Avriel, an Assistant Director General of the Foreign Ministry; Asher Ben Nathan, former Director General of the Defense Ministry; and Chaim Yahill, former Director General of the Foreign Ministry.

WEST GERMAN OFFICIALS ARE SUSPECTS OF NAZI WARTIME CRIMES

Herr Oskar Christ, aged 53, the chief of Wiesbaden security police, has been arrested on suspicion of taking part in Nazi war crimes, the town authorities announced. The arrest follows inquiries by the West German Centre for the Investigation of Nazi Crimes at Ludwigsburg, as well as in Austria, says the London Times. Also as a result of Ludwigsburg investigations, Herr Paul Liebermann, aged 58, a former S.S. man, now a businessman, of Coburg, Bavaria, was arrested. He is suspected of taking part in mass shootings on the eastern front during the war.

An increase in the legal staff of the Ludwigsburg centre was decided on after a meeting of the Ministers of Justice of the German Länder. The meeting had been summoned by Dr. Weber, the Federal Minister of Justice, to decide what measures should be taken to make best use of the time obtained by the Bundestag's recent decision to put back by four years the deadline for new trials of those suspected of Nazi war crimes, involving murder, until 1970.

The present staff is 23; it is proposed over the next few months to second lawyers from the various Länder to make a staff of 50 in all. When the centre was set up in 1958 it had nine lawyers at work.

Dr. Graf, the Bremen Minister of Justice, said the Ludwigsburg centre would be looking systematically into highly placed officials, who organized the killings, without participating directly, and other leading Nazis.

Dr. Karl Vialon, State Secretary of the West German Ministry of Economic Cooperation, should be suspended from office until the exact nature of his wartime activities has been cleared up, the Süddeutsche Zeitung demanded.

The Koblenz Public Prosecutor has for several months been examining documents said to relate to Dr. Vialon's wartime activities. The State Secretary said at a Nazi war crimes trial last year that he had known nothing about the gassing of Jews in occupied eastern Europe.

A leading article signed by Süddeutsche Zeitung's widely respected legal correspondent says that the "scandalous practice" of keeping the high official at his post detracts from the good affect created by President Lübke's recent speech in the former Bergen-Belsen concentration camp, says the London Times. "Who is and who was Vialon?" the paper goes on. "A functionary of the Nazi state who from May, 1943, to October, 1944, had charge of the financial department of the Reich Kommissariat for the occupied eastern territories and received regular reports about how much clothing and gold tooth fillings from Jews had been collected."

After quoting from Dr. Vialon's statement on oath as a witness at last year's trial in which Georg Heuser, chief of the Rhineland-Palatinate criminal police, was sentenced to 15 years' hard labour for the murder of 7,000 Jews, the article observes: "Otherwise Herr Vialon claims to know absolutely nothing, although he had to collect up all the property of those whom Heuser and the like of him executed."

The Federal Chancellor's office acknowledged a few days ago receipt of material from the Jewish documentation centre in Vienna. This material, said to be copies of documents from archives in the Soviet Union, and to relate to Dr. Vialon, is also being examined at Bonn. Dr. Vialon, before he went to the Ministry of Economic Cooperation, was financial expert in the Chancellor's office under Dr. Globke.

A decision to suspend the State Secretary can only be taken by his ministry. The Koblenz Public Prosecutor has been looking into the case since last summer, but it was only last month that it decided to send two lawyers to east Berlin to obtain documents said there, says the London Times. These came originally from Poland.

Oswald Kaduk, a former SS Elite Guard sergeant at Auschwitz, admitted tearfully that the Nazi concentration camp was a "huge crime and I regret it could happen", says the New York Times. Kaduk, on trial in Frankfurt with 19 other camp staff members, made the admission in answer to a prosecution request for a frank description of the "real face of Auschwitz."

...onsul In India Asks Group To Call Off Event For Him

The Indian Friends of Israel Society abruptly cancelled a reception for the departing Israeli consul in Bombay, Khushwant Singh, one of India's leading writers and the Society's founder, said that the reception was called off, reports the New York Times, at the request of the consul, Peretz Gordon.

Mr. Gordon, in New Delhi on a visit, declined to explain his request. Several weeks ago he said he would be delighted to attend. For now he would say only, "I have informed the Society that I cannot be there."

However, reliable sources said Israel was seeking to avoid an embarrassing incident such as the one last year when the Indian Government forced the last-minute cancellation of a reception marking Israeli Independence Day.

India's relations with Israel have been strained for some years. Although India recognizes Israel, New Delhi has never permitted the establishment of full diplomatic ties. Israel's only representative is the consul in Bombay.

Observers in India believe the Indian Government's attitude toward Israel is governed by three factors:

The wish to please the thirteen Arab states whose votes it feels it needs in the United Nations on the Kashmir issue.

Pressure from India's fifty million Moslems, who make up more than one-tenth the country's population.

The policy of sending chiefly Moslem ambassadors to Arab States, which creates a disproportionately large group of high-ranking Moslems in India's foreign service.

The Patriot, India's chief pro-Communist daily newspaper, reported that Arab diplomats had expressed concern about the reception. The newspaper noted that Dr. Zakir Hussain, India's Vice President, who is a Moslem, is scheduled to visit several Arab states and that Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri will go to Cairo in June, says the New York Times. The Patriot said the reception

Roll out of bed and you're on the golf course at Kutsher's.

Our golf course is 400 feet away from the main building, 250 feet away from the dining room (but if you want to play in your pajamas you can't eat in them) and 280 feet away from our 2 night clubs (in case you'd rather golf than dance 'till dawn). It's a champion course: 18 beautiful holes, 3 tees at every hole, 7,157 yards long. With lush fairways, fiendish traps and greens smooth as velvet. (Good velvet.) Plus a driving range, a putting green, an abundance of electric carts... all of it presided over by PGA Pro Tony Longo — our famous Doctor of Golf.

For the family we've got Broadway entertainment, 4 bands, a teen program, day camp, night patrols, tennis, indoor and outdoor swimming... but not for you. For you we've got a nice, soft bed. With television. Who can dance after 18 holes? You?

CLASS IN COOKERY

two cups flour
one-third cup oil
three-quarters cup warm water
one teaspoon salt
four teaspoons powdered sugar

Place flour on board or in deep bowl, and make a well. Add salt, oil, and powdered sugar. Add three-quarters cup warm water, and keep patting until the dough becomes a ball. Add a little flour and keep slapping for fifteen minutes until the dough is smooth. Place dough in a slightly-greased bowl and cover completely with a clean cloth. Let this stand for one hour. The longer it stays the easier it will be to stretch. Spread a tablecloth on the table. Sprinkle it all over with flour. Divide dough in two parts and sprinkle with flour. Roll dough a little and cover with the ends of tablecloth for ten minutes. Start rolling again and stretching the dough until it becomes as thin as tissue paper.

Filling

one pound crushed walnuts
two cups sugar
one cup wine
one pound white sultana raisins two lemons, juice and grated rind
two pounds Turkish Delight
one jar Maraschino cherries (sixteen ounces)
two cups bread crumbs

In a large bowl place all ingredients except the Turkish Delight. Make certain that the mixture is moist. When the dough is stretched out, line up the filling along the table at one end. Sprinkle the dough sheet with a little oil and icing sugar. Cut the Turkish Delight into half-inch pieces and place on top of filling. Take an end of the tablecloth and roll up the dough. Then cut it in lengths according to the size of the baking pan. Bake at 300 to 325 degrees for twenty minutes. Cut into pieces when required. Set in the refrigerator well-covered; strudel will keep for a long time.

4967 Isabella Avenue, Montreal.

two eggs
one tablespoon flour
oil or butter for frying

Place cheese in mixing bowl, add salt, sugar and eggs. Mix thoroughly. Add flour but do not make too thick. Mix well. Spoon into oiled or buttered frying pan. Cook until browned.

Setting Up Passover Seder In Saigon And What It Takes

By Chaplain Richard E. Dryer, Jewish Chaplain with U.S. Armed Forces in Vietnam

Plans must be made well in advance for anything in Vietnam; regular shipments take from two to three months from the United States. But the situation is so fluid that plans will have to be changed at the last minutes anyway. Our troop strength can, and did, almost double in the course of one month.

The late Chaplain Meir Engel started the ball rolling with the customary letter to the Jewish Welfare Board on December 8, 1964, requesting the necessary kosher food supplies. Following his untimely death, I arrived in the country on January 26, 1965, and after ten days for my orientation and reading through the files, I wrote to JWB on February 8, asking whether the supplies Chaplain Engel had ordered were on the way, noting that if they were not they would have to be airlifted.

JWB coordinated this problem with the military and soon the answer came in the form of a cable from the Office of the Army Chief of Chaplains asking my Command to cite funds for air shipment of 2,456 pounds of Passover supplies "requested by Chaplain Dryer." The cable also contained the additional information that no one here suspected, that the US Army Supply Services Command in the Ryukyu Islands had requisitioned Passover supplies for Vietnam. They were immediately in touch by cable to determine what supplies they were sending us. Having received their reply, the next step was to coordinate with our Comptroller for the fund citation and then send a TWX to the Chief of Chaplains requesting air shipment of 872 pounds of Passover supplies as a supplementary shipment.

Where to have the Seder was the next problem. The military operates differently here than it does anywhere else. There are no mess halls as we are normally accustomed to them. All messes, even enlisted messes, are operated on a pay-as-you-go basis and there is no surplus capacity for special parties, receptions, or Seder dinners. However, a short while after my arrival in the country, I met Gene Schram, USO director for the Pacific Area; Sam Anderson, director of operations for the USO in Vietnam, and Alan Sternberg, associate director of the USO Club in Saigon, and this problem was promptly solved as they insisted that I allow them to donate their facility and snack bar staff to the project.

The Army supply system loaned us new plastic dishes for 100. The Navy Mess Section loaned us white tablecloths to enhance the festive appearance. (We would have gotten new chinaware from them, but their backup supply was destroyed in the Brink Hotel bombing. Maybe next year.) The State Department, through the US Embassy, helped too by lending us extra tables and an extra stove.

Then, two days before the Seder I was called by the Catholic Marine Chaplain in Danang. Due to the tactical situation, the Marine Commander would not permit his 15 Jewish men to come the 300 miles to Saigon for our community Seder. He was willing, however, to give them the two days off and even a separate tent for them to meet together. What could I do for them?

Thanks to JWB and a conscientious Protestant Chaplain from their area, I could do plenty. This Chaplain came down to Saigon and we arranged with the Air Force for an immediate shipment of almost 200 pounds of JWB 'solo seders', a case of kosher wine, macaroons, and even a pesadich (Passover) cake my wife had baked and sent to me, which the Chaplain accompanied to make sure it reached its proper destination on time.

Of course, many more 'solo seder' packages from JWB had already gone out to men who knew well in advance that they would not be able to make the community Seder. For example, a Jewish doctor, the only doctor in a miniscule Special Forces detachment deep in the jungle: No Army career man, only in for the minimum two years, he didn't want to "waste" those two years in a dispensary in the States, so he volunteered for Special Forces.

He has now become an expert on exotic tropical diseases, spends a good deal of his time caring for children in a nearby Vietnamese Orphan Asylum, is looking forward to getting back to civilian life, but with no regrets and a great sense of accomplishment during his military career. When I last visited him down in the Delta, he was happy to take with him into the jungle the paperbacks on Jewish philosophy and "The Life of Akiba" that JWB has sent to Vietnam for the kind of religious education program that must be adapted to hundreds of sites with only one or two Jews at each.

A Seder with its exciting story of freedom from slavery is always thrilling. But in the military, there is an added thrill or two. I never cease to be thrilled by the sincere and active cooperation I always receive from the many non-Jews in and out of the service, without whose efforts the holding of our Seders would be virtually impossible. It's interesting too to teach Vietnamese, who have never heard of Jews, much less our customs, how to make a kosher Seder. I wish I could find the words to describe the vigor with which Truong Binh Kien, the USO snack bar manager, acted as mashgiach (supervisor) and diligently saw to it that no crumb of chometz came anywhere near our preparation area.

Seder in Saigon was a wonderful experience for the men stationed in Vietnam and Thailand who attended (and a lone woman, a Navy Librarian who lit the festival candles for us), but I think that we will be forgiven for "amending" the traditional text of the Haggadah to read; "This year we are here. May next year find us celebrating the Passover in Israel or at home with our loved ones."

This was the last day of testimony in the trial — Germany's longest — which began December 20, 1963, and has extended through 158 Assize Court sessions. Summations and verdicts are expected in July or early August.

Kaduk, 58 years old, testified that he had taken to drink because "one could try to be as hard as possible, but whoever saw the doomed women and children at the camp had to pull oneself together."

Many of the 360 witnesses who testified during the trial described Kaduk as one of the most brutal guards "who loved to beat and kill prisoners for no reason."

THE ARAB BOYCOTT: U. S. UN-NEUTRAL NEUTRALITY

The New York Herald Tribune says:

The Arab countries, declaring themselves to be in a state of war, have the right to conduct economic warfare against Israel, and the latter, if it chooses, may reply in kind. The United States, which seeks to maintain friendly relations with both, has the right to remain neutral. The Washington Administration professes to be doing so. But it isn't.

It is permitting the Arab states to conduct their economic warfare on American soil by allowing their diplomatic, consular and business agents in this country to engage in their boycott and blacklist activities.

There is nothing, of course, to stop them from such activities on their own soil, or on that of their Communist friends or of others who may be motivated purely by profit. But that is no reason why Washington should make their task easier and, by doing so, become the unwitting accomplice. Its failure to uphold strict rules of neutrality has exposed American chambers of commerce and other trade associations to pressure by Arab states to handle their blacklisting papers and questionnaires for them.

To the extent that they are doing so, this raises the startling question whether such chambers and associations should be required to register as agents for foreign countries — and not just any countries but ones which are in a state of war. And the question is even more startling if applied to the U.S. Department of Commerce. The Herald Tribune series on this issue has pointed out that the department allowed its journal to advertise the discriminatory trade offer of an Arab state.

The proposal by a group of Congressmen to legislate against the conduct of Arab economic warfare on American soil makes sense. It would not end the warfare. That will take years and will come only after the Arabs themselves recognize that their best interests will be served by coming to terms with Israel. But it might help reduce it, and correct our presently un-neutral position.

WHY?

The Toronto Star says:

Shock and indignation are the first natural reactions to the news of yesterday's affair on Toronto Island, in which young boys at a synagogue picnic were attacked with clubs and baseball bats. But the second reaction is to ask why. Why should a group of teenagers launch themselves in this savage unprovoked fashion on another group whom, in all probability, they had never seen before?

Because the victims were Jews, it is natural to suspect that anti-semitism was involved — especially in view of the flood of "hate" propaganda which is being distributed in the city. But there seems to be no evidence that anti-semitism was the motive — though this is obviously an aspect which needs to be carefully investigated.

A policeman described the attackers as "just a gang of plaza punks over here to raise trouble." But this is not an explanation. What is the origin of these disorderly gangs which have sprung up in recent years, and which infest supermarket plazas and other convenient meeting places? They do not seem to be — as they are in some cities — a product of extreme poverty and slum life, because they are often found in well-to-do suburban districts. What is it in our affluent society that drives adolescents into this kind of aimless and brutal violence?

The law must take its course in the ugly affair at the Island, and those responsible must be firmly dealt with. But punishment is not enough. The incident should inspire Metro or provincial officials to commission a real study "in depth" of the causes behind outbreaks of this sort, the home and neighborhood conditions that produce them. Until we understand better the wellsprings of this kind of lawlessness, we have little chance of correcting it.

ISRAELI CONSUL IN INDIA ASKS GROUP TO CALL OFF EVENT FOR HIM

"may not be helpful as far as India's effort to consolidate friendship with the Arab states is concerned."

Mr. Singh said that the Government made no effort this year to interfere with the reception, perhaps because there was little it could do. The reception, unlike last year's event, which was to have been given by the consulate in a Government hotel, was to have been sponsored by a private society in a private hotel.

Last year, the Government's chief of protocol told Mr. Gordon that he could hold such a reception only in Bombay. The Ashoka Hotel in New Delhi then cancelled his reservation of its main lounge for the event.

The public outcry over this incident led to the formation of the Indian Friends of Israel Society. Among its more than 100 members are such well-known writers in India as Frank Moraes, the editor of The Indian Express, Nirad Chaudhuri, and R. Prawer Jhabvala.

The Society has not had an easy time. Last fall, one of its most prominent members was insulted by Arab diplomats who walked out of a reception at which she was present. Both the Indian International Center and the Indian Council of World Affairs have refused to let the Society meet in their buildings.

Last year's cancellation incident and the formation of the Society have stimulated great interest in India and in Israel. More than forty newspapers all over the country, says the New York Times, printed material on Israel to commemorate her Independence Day on May 6, much of it sympathetic to Israel.

C.J.C. HEAD URGED C.B.C. TO WITHDRAW FILM OF INTERVIEW WITH WOMAN EX-PROTEGE OF HITLER

Michael Garber, Q.C., president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, wrote to Alphonse Ouimet, president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Ottawa, urging the withdrawal of the film, shown this month, of an interview with Leni Riefenstahl, who was described by the "CBC Times" as a motion picture producer who "played a key role in Hitler's propaganda machine" and whose documentaries "glamourized all aspects of Nazi life".

Mr. Garber's letter noted that this program ("Other Voices") "is not going to be an 'exposure' show nor does it purport to be a 'news commentary' (these being the basis on which previous air time for Nazis has been justified by the CBC); the program rather appears to be an interview with Miss Riefenstahl, which would rank her on a par in artistic achievement with artists such as painter Frederick Varley and writer Wyndham Lewis. Of course we recognize that many Nazis were 'artists' in many fields but we cannot appreciate the validity of a decision to confer dignity and status on their artistry, considering their aims and actions and how such artistry brought the world to the brink of destruction . . ."

The letter pointed out that "The Canadian Jewish Congress does not desire to engage in a continual battle with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The Canadian Jewish Congress is wholeheartedly committed to the principles inherent in the concept of a Canadian national broadcasting system. Part of this commitment impels us to a considerable feeling of pain and desolation at what we deem to be at least extreme insensitivity and at most serious irresponsibility in the planning and production of programs that feature Nazis . . ."

We urged the CBC to withdraw the film of the interview and expressed the hope that "we would sincerely like to feel that once and for all we could know that glorification of Nazis, which is what these programs do, is not and will not be part of the production or program policy of any department, division, or any other sub-section of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation".

Mr. Ouimet replied that "It is certainly not the purpose of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to 'glorify' present or former Nazis in any way. On the other hand, the Corporation, within reason, must be free to air programs on any subject which is interesting, topical, educational, informative, and so forth. To place a ban on all things Nazi would set a precedent for demands to ban all things Communist, or all things dealing with apartheid, for example. In other words, the Corporation cannot accept the suggestions made in your letter that Nazism is a subject which should never be dealt with by the CBC".

The President of the CBC further pointed out that the program on Leni Riefenstahl "in no way supports the Nazi movement. It is primarily the portrait of an aging, naive artist who thirty years ago was caught up by the enthusiasm engendered by the Nazis. She still cannot comprehend the nature of the Nazi movement, nor her contributions to it which, of course, she cannot deny. We believe that the program will be useful because it illustrates the confusion and self-destruction of a one-sided person with limited knowledge involved in a world she does not understand. Although there is an element of self pity, she makes no effort to whitewash, glorify, or justify the Nazis, and the over-all effect is, frankly, pathetic rather than appealing. Incidentally, the interview was conducted by Charles Wasserman, son of the famous author, Jacob Wasserman, and the story editor was Martin Lavut".

The letter concluded: "In closing, please let me assure you that we of the CBC are very well aware of the feelings not only of your organization, but of many other people as well concerning the Nazi movement, and that programs which deal with this subject appear on TV or radio only after the most careful consideration".

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORP. RUMORS

By Dennis Braithwaite, in the Toronto Globe and Mail

Rumors were circulating in Ottawa that CBC president Alphonse Ouimet will be out of that job in September, when his eight-year term comes to an end. Such speculation (started this time by the Liberal Citizen) is not new, but it's timely because of the imminence of the Fowler committee's report on broadcasting.

The committee is deliberating in secret, but hints and murmurs coming out of the capital suggest its report, when it comes, will be the most important document of its kind since the Aird Commission of 1926 recommended establishment of a public broadcasting system. Fowler and his colleagues have been examining that concept in great detail — along with every other aspect of radio and television — and their findings, if accepted by the government, could cause much greater upheavals than the replacement of President Ouimet.

Everything that has happened in broadcasting since the last major examination of the industry (by the same Robert M. Fowler, in 1957) points logically to the need for a redefinition of the CBC's mandate. (The malaise that has spread through the corporation since the committee was set up a year ago reflects a neurotic anxiety over its future.)

In simple terms, what the Fowler committee must decide is whether, at this stage in Canada's development, the CBC should be cut back to a more modest function, or whether it should be enlarged, strengthened and granted more independence from parliament — by being given a charter or at least 10-year financing. The decision is agonizing and complicated, because there exists in this country a national ambivalence on the subject of public broadcasting versus free enterprise.

Can Canada get along with less of a public system than it has, or shouldn't the CBC grow as the country grows? If the CBC were to be cut back, could the private segment do the job that would then need doing?

Whether Alphonse Ouimet is reappointed in the fall, or is replaced by his assistant, Ron Fraser, or by someone from the outside — Don Jamieson? Royce Frith? Gerard Pelletier? Fowler himself? — will depend on the nature of the committee's recommendations and the Government's intentions regarding their adoption or rejection.

Some clues: Robert Fowler, though his last report was pro-CBC, is a champion of free enterprise; Gordon Sheppard, cultural commissar for the Government, was recently dropped as committee secretary, which would mean Fowler is asserting his independence from the Cabinet; any reduction of the CBC would hurt most in Quebec; the Liberals, philosophically and as a political strategy, are dedicated to further Government encroachment in every aspect of Canadian life.

Run it through your computer and it comes out this way: Fowler may want to hold the CBC as is, or chop it, but the CBC will continue to proliferate, with Government encouragement.
